

Red, White or Green? California Wine Choices Expand.

01/18/10

It's green. Officials at the industry-backed Wine Institute announced a program Wednesday that outlines steps growers and winemakers must take to call themselves "sustainable." The regulations cover everything from energy and water consumption to health care for workers and relationships with neighbors. Independent auditors will enforce compliance. Chris Savage of Gallo Wines says retailers increasingly are demanding sustainable products, a trend he expects will continue to grow. California is the world's fourth-largest producer of wine. Nearly two-thirds of the state's wine producers are participating in Chris Savage of Gallo Wines says retailers increasingly are demanding sustainable products, a trend he expects will continue to grow.